RESPONSIBLE HEALTHCARE ECOSYSTEMS

Dear reader,

Welcome to the fourth issue of CHERRIES newsletter, the last one for this challenging and unusual year.

CHERRIES project started in January and after a couple of months, our initial plans were faced with the COVID-19 global pandemic, which strongly interested our key stakeholders in the healthcare sector, and obliged us to rethink the project activities and the regional pilots adapting them to the current circumstances.

The healthcare sector in Europe (and worldwide) faced and is still facing several challenges that force healthcare professionals, policymakers and even citizens to innovate products, services and policies.

Re-thinking the sector with and for society, with new technological means, new ways of accessing services, new needs and demands, and new social dynamics is even more important than one year ago. We are therefore convinced that CHERRIES RRI driven experiments in the healthcare sector can strongly contribute to this systemic change we are undergoing in Europe.

Together we went through this year, and together we look forward to a better and healthier 2021.

CHERRIES Territorial Training Workshops | what's happening in the CHERRIES regions?

During October and November CHERRIES territorial partners arranged regional “Training workshops” aimed at engaging and preparing the local system of stakeholders for the experimental phase of the project. These events were designed in collaboration with Knowledge & Innovation as an itinerary of reflection and capacity building on RRI-based demand articulation, experimentation, and co-creation processes in health by involving key territorial multipliers and stakeholders of the Healthcare R&I ecosystem (providers, policymakers, payors, patients).

HIGHLIGHTS FROM CHERRIES PILOT REGIONS

CHERRIES ÖREBRO | Insights from regional workshops

In Örebro, during September and October, territorial partners arranged several local workshops presenting the CHERRIES project and the opportunities offered by the Regional RRI experimentation. A training workshop on RRI in health was held the 19 November and targeted actors in the innovation system and healthcare policymakers, as well as intermediaries, establishing connections among existing innovation communities (smart specialisation strategy actors; social innovation partnership) and societal actors.
